Necessary to Feed Cows Carefully.

The producer must appreciate that the feeding of turnips garlie, ragweed, unsound silage, etc., will give rise to undesirable flavors in milk and he must guard against this very carefully, sand C. B. Lane of the United States deparement of agriculture. I remember in my experience in producing milk of having some complaints about the flavor along in the fall, and on looking for the cause found that the herd had been fed some frost-bitten alfalfa. At another time a tarry flavor in the milk was traced to a piece of tarred paper that had blown into the yard, and one cow that delighted in chewing most snything that she came across had eaten some of this paper and tainted the milk of the whole herd. Garlie is a great source of taint in many sec ons, and where cows are pastured it is difficult to keep it out. The best Wednesd way to get rid of the flavor is to bring D. Ladd. the cows out of the pasture a few hours before milking time. Where the soiling system is practiced and the fields are well cultivated garlie gives no trouble. Mr. and Mrs Harry Taisey visited For several years the New Jersey agricultural college farm has been only farm that has supplied milk in the city of New Brunswick (in the spring and fall when garlie is bad) that as not had the garlie odor. Simply because the cows were not pastured but
